

Half day Acora typical Sunday market (private)

Get ready for an exciting excursion to the Artisanal Sunday market in Acora. Only 35 kms away from Puno city, Acora has two colonial temples of San Juan and San Pedro but it is more visited for its market, a commerce hub for the area. Here we will find hundreds of different potato species, unusual fruits and vegetables, medicinal plants, as well as colorful clothing and textiles of the Aymara people.

This market has a variety of the crafts typical of the area, famous for its beautiful textile work. However, there is a particularity to this market: money is not as used for buying goods and you will be able to see producers barter their goods among each other and with the customers as well. This is one of the remaining places where you still have the chance to experience this ancient custom lost in most parts of the world. A picture of daily life in the most colorful traditional dresses.

After the tour you will be transferred to your hotel.
